FAQs

Is this for new or existing staff members?

Both. This course can upskill long standing employees whilst also benefitting people new to the sector.

What kind of time commitment is required?

The ESFA requires 20% of your contracted hours to be committed to your apprenticeship learning. This could include learning which you already undertake at work, dedicated time with your Trainer Assessor, independent learning activities, participation in first aid training and other activity. Ask your Trainer Assessor for more details.

Am I eligible for this course?

The main requirements are that you work 50% or more in England, and that this qualification would represent 'significant new skills' (i.e. generally that you have not completed this course before). There are other detailed requirements which we will go through with you during the initial assessment and enrolment process.

How will the course be assessed?

You will be required to undertake a number of workplace observations, carrying out your day to day duties, take part in professional discussions and provide reflective accounts of your practice. Your employer can also support the assessment process by providing witness testimonies as evidence of your competency. Don't worry if you haven't been formally assessed in a long time, we'll help you every step of the way.

Where will my sessions take place?

All face to face sessions will be conducted in your place of work at a date and time to suit yourself and your employer. These are monthly visits you will be required to attend.
